

NHS AT 60

The past sixty years since the inception of the NHS have seen many developments in how health is delivered. Where patients are treated and recover; the conditions that are considered illness and the techniques doctors have available to deal with disease have all undergone dramatic changes since 1948.

This exhibition explores some of the major advances in surgery that have occurred since the start of the NHS and how patients have benefited.

PROFESSOR HAROLD ELLIS
 Professor Ellis qualified in 1948 the month the NHS was born. We are grateful to him for the 'early days' images shown above.
